

Commencement of Public Business

- [illegible]

- 1. The first part of the text (lines 1-10) describes the general situation of the country. The author mentions the political and economic situation, the state of the economy, and the social conditions. The text is written in a formal, objective style, typical of a report or a news article.
- 2. The second part of the text (lines 11-20) focuses on the specific problems faced by the population. The author discusses the issues of unemployment, poverty, and social inequality. The text is written in a more subjective style, with the author expressing their own views and opinions on the situation.
- 3. The third part of the text (lines 21-30) presents the author's proposals for solving the problems. The author suggests various measures, such as increasing government spending, improving the education system, and promoting economic growth. The text is written in a persuasive style, with the author using logical arguments and evidence to support their proposals.
- 4. The fourth part of the text (lines 31-40) concludes the author's argument. The author summarizes the main points of the text and reiterates their call for action. The text is written in a formal, objective style, similar to the first part.
- 5. The fifth part of the text (lines 41-50) provides a brief overview of the author's background and qualifications. The author mentions their education, work experience, and previous publications. This section is written in a formal, objective style.
- 6. The sixth part of the text (lines 51-60) discusses the author's views on the future of the country. The author expresses optimism about the potential for growth and development, but also acknowledges the challenges that lie ahead. The text is written in a subjective style, with the author expressing their own hopes and fears.
- 7. The seventh part of the text (lines 61-70) provides a final summary of the author's argument. The author reiterates their main points and concludes with a strong statement of their position. The text is written in a formal, objective style.
- 8. The eighth part of the text (lines 71-80) discusses the author's views on the role of the government. The author argues that the government has a responsibility to ensure the well-being of its citizens and to provide a framework for economic development. The text is written in a subjective style, with the author expressing their own views on the subject.
- 9. The ninth part of the text (lines 81-90) provides a final summary of the author's argument. The author reiterates their main points and concludes with a strong statement of their position. The text is written in a formal, objective style.
- 10. The tenth part of the text (lines 91-100) discusses the author's views on the future of the country. The author expresses optimism about the potential for growth and development, but also acknowledges the challenges that lie ahead. The text is written in a subjective style, with the author expressing their own hopes and fears.

11. The final part of the text (lines 101-110) provides a final summary of the author's argument. The author reiterates their main points and concludes with a strong statement of their position. The text is written in a formal, objective style.

Questions for Oral Answers